Our History

From 1471-1850 the manor of Brownsover was owned by the Boughton family who were the creators of Boughton Baronets. In the mid 19th century the old manor house was replaced with the present mansion, designed in a Victorian Gothic style by architect Sir George Gilbert Scott. William Holland designed a stained glass windows and carved tables as frames for Italian marble slabs. He is well known for establishing a Stained Glass and Decorative works at St. John's, Warwick. Other contributors to the new manor were Marshall and Snelgrove of London, and Eld and Chamberlain, of Midland House, Birmingham relating to the carpets and furnishings that were chosen for the house.

In the 1970's the Hall was converted into a hotel and today Brownsover Hall is now a 3-star hotel including 47 bedrooms, abar and Wineglass restaurant offering a 'simple food, made special' seasonal menu. With views over the Swift Valley nature reserve, beautiful grounds and the mix of a fairy-tale Mansion House and modern 350 person marquee it's no wonder Brownsover Hall is the perfect place to say 'I do'
